DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments, see the pre-appeal, filed 2/27/08, with respect to the rejection(s) of the claim(s) have been fully considered and are persuasive. Therefore, the rejection has been withdrawn. However, upon further consideration, a new ground(s) of rejection is made as indicated below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

1. Claims 1-4, 10, and 14-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rosenbaum et al. (6917009), (hereinafter referred to as "Rosenbaum") in view of Nieswand et al. (6520407), (hereinafter referred to as "Nieswand").

Regarding claims 1 and 15, Rosenbaum discloses an apparatus that relates to the field of mail processing (Rosenbaum: column 1, lines 14-16). This apparatus comprises "sending image data for unresolved information to a video coding station" (Rosenbaum: column 4, lines 54-56; column 5, lines 7-22, wherein the unresolved information is the rejected mail pieces). However, Rosenbaum fails to disclose determining if an estimated time exceeds a threshold. Nieswand teaches that when sorting mail items, not all mail items can be processed completely automatically (Nieswand: column 1, lines 9-11). To help alleviate this problem, Nieswand discloses "determine whether an estimated time for video coding exceeds a determined threshold, if an imaging device does not resolve information needed for handling an article" (Nieswand: column 2, lines 55-59; column 3, lines 40-60, wherein the short predetermined time interval indicates a comparison with a threshold in order to correctly determine when the interval has expired). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to take the apparatus disclosed by Rosenbaum and add the time comparison taught by Nieswand in order to obtain an apparatus that can automatically code a greater number of mail pieces.

Regarding claims 2 and 16, Rosenbaum discloses "sending image data to a video coding buffer before the data is sent to the coding station" (Rosenbaum: column 5, lines 7-9, wherein the buffer is the database which is divided into sections).

Regarding claims 3-4 and 17-18, Rosenbaum discloses "determining whether the video coding station is busy and sending image data to the coding buffer is the station is not busy" (Rosenbaum: column 5, lines 7-23, wherein checking whether the station is busy is checking the priority and availability of the stations. Stations which are busy will not have the image data sent to the corresponding section of the database).

Regarding claims 10 and 19, note the examiners rejection for claim 1, and in addition Rosenbaum discloses "sending image data to a wait queue until a determined release event or timeout occurs" (Rosenbaum: figure 3, column 6, lines 40-45, wherein the wait queue is the holding; column 6, lines 45-55, wherein the release event or timeout is if another method was successful, the image is removed from holding) and "sending information from the wait queue to the buffer if a release event occurs" (Rosenbaum: figure 3, column 6, lines 50-57, wherein the release event is other methods not being successful resulting in the image being transferred from holding to the particular section of the database).

Regarding claim 14, Rosenbaum discloses "the article is mail pieces" (Rosenbaum: column 5, lines 7-8).

2. Claims 5 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rosenbaum et al. (6917009), (hereinafter referred to as "Rosenbaum") in view of Nieswand et al. (6520407), (hereinafter referred to as "Nieswand") in further view of Mauduley et al. (5043908), (hereinafter referred to as "Mauduley").

Regarding claims 5 and 20, note the examiners rejection for claim 1, and in addition, claims 5 and 20 differ from claim 1 in that claims 5 and 20 further require the estimated time to be a weighted average response time. Mauduley teaches that there is a need in the prior art for a system that provides up-to-date information for mail pieces (Mauduley: column 2, lines 5-10). To help alleviate this problem, Mauduley discloses "calculating an average response time"

(Mauduley: column 2, lines 29-31). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to implement the processing taught by Mauduley in order to provide up-to-date information regarding mail pieces.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 6-9 and 11-13 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
